In many cultures, childless women suffer discrimination, stigma and ostracism.

"More than a Mother" initiative aims to empower infertile women through access to information, education, health and change of mind-set.

"More than a Mother" in partnership with Africa Fertility Society will discuss different challenges and solutions to build Fertility care Capacity and improve access to regulated and cost effective fertility care in Africa and Developing Countries.

Through this initiative, together with our partners, we will address the key challenges associated with resource constrained settings such as prevention of infertility, education, self-development, ART/IVF regulation, geographic barriers, and limited resources arguments.

Grace Kambini

Together with our partners, we will continue our commitment to empower infertile women across the continent through access to information, health and change of mind set.

In some cultures, childless women still suffer discrimination, stigma and ostracism. An inability to have a child or to become pregnant can result in being greatly isolated, disinherited or assaulted. This often results in divorce or physical and psychological violence.

Meet Grace Kambini, An Infertile Woman from Kenya , who would share her experience of lack of information and access to fertility care and how this affected her life.

During our panel discussion, we will discuss the challenges and solutions to improve access to infertility care and building fertility care capacity in the continent.
